Bassett Preserve

Donated by the Bassett Family in the 1980's, Paradise Hill Preserve encompasses 112.8 acres of lovely New England countryside.

The Preserve, 600 feet above sea level in some spots, is comprised of rolling hills, deciduous forest, ridgeline and wetlands. The western trail portions provide easy hiking through oak forest, while the east is rugged with exposed ledge and boulders. The low-lying areas are densely vegetated with trees, shrubs and ground cover. Mountain Laurel abounds and brooks and streams flow throughout the property. Crisscrossing every quadrant are the numerous stonewalls, reminders of over 200 years of agricultural use that alternated between logging, grazing and food crops. Today these same stonewalls provide shelter to hibernating salamanders and snakes, offer cover for chipmunks and other small animals, as well as direct watercourses. The southeast portion of the trail also passes the foundation ruins of a sawmill and commercial laundry operated by the Gilbert Family who owned the land from 1752 until 1940.

Please enjoy Paradise Hill Preserve's trails, flora, fauna, geology, history, peace, quiet and trail map—the first in the series of Southbury Land Trust Nature Preserve Trail Maps.
